You leave Marrakech at 9am to begin your Morocco desert tour to the south. You cross the High Atlas Mountains over the Tizi n 'Tichka Pass, a masterpiece of road construction that towers at 2260 meters altitude. Before being built by the French in 1936, the only other way to cross the High Atlas was along the route, followed by camel trains, and the zig-zag stretch of the road shows how tedious that was !!! .

Stop for lunch and visit the World Heritage site of Ait Ben Haddou, a magnificent red mud and straw village that sets the scene for many Hollywood film productions, and the final scenes of the TV series' series three, A Game of Thrones. You can also explore Ouarzazate, the home of Kasbah Taourirt, once owned by the powerful Glaoui family, who built their wealth on tax credits levied on camel caravans traveling between Marrakech and Timbuktu.

Then across the barren and rocky Middle Atlas, where many buildings have a Swiss Austrian style, this is Ifrane the Switzerland of Morocco.

The sprawling souks are also not to be missed, and best explored with a local guide who brings the moody narrow market streets to life and offers you a fun and immersive shopping spree.

Afterwards, treat yourself to a candlelit dinner in the stunning La Maison Bleue, where you can enjoy a celebration of traditional Moroccan cuisine accompanied by the harmonious sounds of local musicians - an authentic experience you will not forget.
